However frequently they may be detectad and punished according to law, there are always conving imposters ready to deceive the public, by slightly allering the figures of the chronometer or by inserting some Chinese characters or English words on the device, or by using similar characters as the eight Chinese trigrams, not to mention other methods of deception which are too numerous to be detailed.

As our printed sign-marks have in course of time become indistinct, we bendo inform the public that, from the 1st of June 1897. we shall begin to put into each chest of tea s printed notice in both English and Chinese, and to paste on the outside new, intelligible sign marks.

HONGKONG, THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1897.

It will interest residents generally to learn that progress is now being made-progress of a comparatively rapid kind-with the central sections of the Prays Reclamation. We have often heard it said, that in no other place under an enlightened government would the delay in the Hongkong Reclamation Works have been tolerated. Truly, the Hongkong taxpayer and the Praya lotholder are longsuffering persons. It is now eight years since the Reclamation was decided upon, but it must be admitted the delay in proceeding with the work in V. Brenan, Kellet Bungalow, Mount its early stages was caused by a justifiable objection to the original plan, the details of which were fully dealt with in these columns at the time. Since that difficulty was got over, another delay occurred, when a Petition was presented to the Governor, to suspend operations for a time. The vastiless of the scheme began to terrify deemed advisable by many to wait for better times. This course, however, was not approved by the Government, and the prayer of the Petition was refused. Now the Director of Public Works writes in this The C. M. Co.'s str. Pakling, from Glasstrain regarding the temperary suspension above alluded to-it appears to have been only a two-months' delay :--The interruption caused to the progress of the work by this temporary suspension was very much greater than what might at first sight seem to have been the case. As will be seen on reference to the annual reports of this department the amount of work done during 1893 fell far short of that executed during 1892, but this was not all, the proparation of contracts for the com-pletion of the works being also suspended, the carefully worked out programme for the rubble ... ...1/11 foundations had been deposited, of the weighting, construction of the wall and filling was no longer applicable. On the resumption of the work, rubble foundations were not ready for levelling and weighting; consequently, the diving apparatus and block setting plant could not be used as would have been the case had no interruption in the progress occurred; and further for the last three years owing to the period it takes to level and weight the foundations, the apparatus and plant obtained for this purpose, on the assumption that when once commenced the work would be continuous to completion, have proved insufficient to meet the demands made upon them; hence it is that the rapid completion of the reclamation from Ice House Street to Pottinger Street has been rendered impracticable, and letters have been received from the very persons who signed the petition in 1893 complaining of what they so strongly urged, viz., the suspension of the work.

> ness shown by those residents who first called for a suspension of operations, and, after that request had been denied them. next called upon the Government to accelerate the work. Early in 1893 it was feared the completion of the Reclamation would overstrain the resources of the Colony. Three years subsequently, the patience of the residents was strained to breaking point by the dilatoriness of the officials in charge of the work. The inconveniences caused by an apparently endless blocking-up of the foreshore in a busy port like Hongkong seemed almost intolerable to everyone except the officials concerned. The horrid smells were also a clear danger to health. In his report, however, the Director of Public Works explains away everything to his apparent satisfaction, and seeks to throw the blame for most of the delay upon the residents who tried Mr Cooper has succeeded in this effort, we leave our readers to decide for themselves. There is just a hope now that the Redsmation may be well forward by the end of the century, and it is an encouraging sign to see the crowd of coolies now engaged on

THE MARRIAGE MARKET. Miss Marie Corolli has been employing The series of 'Varsity Tales' with which her potent pen in a crusade against 'The Mr Max Pemberton is enlivening The Marriage Market, and Lady Jeune replies Windsor comes round to 'The Proctor' in The Lady's Realm. Neither disputant, this month, concerning whom and his ways oh an impartial view of human history, can and his minions many a good story, of hope to make much impression upon human which the following is a specimen, is told:

As customary law forbade very English proctor who had not enough a man to marry a woman among his friends of the tongue to buy a biscuit at a buffet. (that is his kindred), he was obliged to steal a wife from among his enemies. But man was walking down Andrew's-street, BINQUULARS, LORD KELVIN'S NAUTICAL INSTRUMENTS, as soon as he had friendly relations breaking as many of the laws and customs with people not of his own name and as one man might be expected to do on crest, and as soon as he had some any given occasion. He had a cigar in his cows, he bought a wife, as the Zulus do, and as the Greeks did before Homer. exceedingly loud suit of checks to aggravate So began the Marriage Market; no cows, his enormities. A custom so deep-rooted a tongue he did not understand, ashamed and widely diffused is hardly to be altered, to declare his ignorance, he took off his hat even by Miss Corelli. On the whole, we and endeavoured to imitate the politeness may even say that the marriage market is of the unfortunate stranger. A man who cannot hold his own in the world is certainly not an ideal son-in-law. If he really is in love, he should do something better than loaf, and ask mankind to find him a patent place. He may be a handsome young fellow, philosophers. It is not given to the majori- returns of the day. ty of lads and lasses to marry their-first loves. We must make the best of things as we find them, matrimony among the rest, till matrimony is abolished and the State is a vast Foundling Hospital. General rules, except the general rule of not marrying for money, are of no avail. If Lady Joune correctly quotes Miss Corelli, then that moralist is wrong in stating that girls are habitually brought out to be sold. A girl is not eternally thinking of bargaining herself away. Very few, indeed, are at-tractive enough to set up as objets de luxe. Go to such a gathering as the Public Schools Match. The young women look honest and jolly, not mercenary and ambitious. Lady Jeune argues thus with great force and some natural indignation. On one side we hear of 'revolting daughters,' on the other of odalisques in the market. Girls cannot be both, and, as a rule, they are neither, but peaceful, "pleasant young creatures, with good hearts and a ne-tural love of wholesome enjoyment. Most of this preaching rests on the exceptions, and is prompted by the desire to make noisy copy. There is no use in it; the sinners are not converted; the general run of girls is untouched by the shrieks and clamour. It is all a question of 'what is the rule and what the exception?' And the rule is for young people to love and marry freely and for affection the market is the exception; in no age has it been so much the exception as the pre-The exception, doubtless, exists most prominently in the kind of society to which the readers of The Lady's Realn do not belong. They are curious about it, as men may be curious about the in habitants of Central America. They read Miss Corellias we read the works of travellers in strange lands. Let them put their own house in order, marry the young men of their hearts and not the more affluent suitors for whom they do not really care. Let them also remember the proverbial inaccuracy of travellers' tales. Even the daughters of Dukes are human, and, as a rule, marry for the same reasons precisely as the daughters of doctors and solicitors—sometimes for money, usually for love, occasionally for convenience, now and then for pique. Lady Jeune, at least, knows what she is talking about, and is a native of her world. not an excited tourist therein. The wife of Auld Robin Gray was not brought up on the kness of Marchionesses, but she was a victim of the Marriage Market as much as if she had been the niece of Lady Kew and the brids of the Marquis of
